

What then shall we do?

A conversation with David Donnison & Julian Tudor Hart

Julian Tudor Hart

17.30 to 19.00 (followed by drinks reception)
Wednesday 10 September 2008

Western Infirmary Lecture Theatre (WILT)
Dumbarton Road, Glasgow G11 6NT

LINK TO MAP

ALL WELCOME (Admission free)

Places reserved on a first come first served basis

David Donnison

Background

David Donnison and Julian Tudor Hart have been giants in their fields for most of the history of the NHS and British Welfare State.

On this special occasion, we ask if Britain is still a generous society? Does the gift economy, as described by Richard Titmuss have a future? As the market is being promoted in England and rejected in Scotland, what are the roles of professionalism, accountability, advocacy and democracy in charting the way forward?

Pre-reading

Before coming to this meeting, you may wish to read Worlds of difference (Lancet 2008 371 1883-1885) by Julian Tudor Hart and David Donnison's response, and Google both participants to catch up on two outstanding careers in public service.

To book a place

For further information about this meeting or to book a place, please contact Rebecca Lenagh-Snow (e-mail Rebecca.Lenagh-Snow@glasgow.gov.uk tel 0141 221 9439) at the Glasgow Centre for Population Health

Scottish
Collaboration for Public Health
Research and Policy

This meeting is supported by General Practice & Primary Care at the University of Glasgow, the MRC Social & Public Health Sciences Research Unit, the Glasgow Centre for Population Health, the Scottish Collaboration for Public Health Research & Policy and the Centre for International Public Health Policy at the University of Edinburgh.

